"Clincher" Paint

We know a paint which holds to the wood like a driven nail. Seasoned lumber is porous. The pores are the empty sap-cells. White lead paint, which dries on the wood in the form of a solid, elastic film, fastens into these pores, and the whole coat of paint is actually riveted like armor-plate to the surface it decorates and protects.

ARMSTRONG & McKELVEY WHITE LEAD Dutch Boy Painter Trade Mark. Pure Linseed Oil

make the paint that spreads into a solid body. It becomes a part of the wood itself—an outer layer that preserves the life of the lumber.

We sell it as well as other painting requisites. Come in and have a talk with us about painting.

Post Toasties

Are mighty handy to have in the house as well as mighty good to eat direct from the package with cream.

Rolled into crumbs and used as an outer dressing for breaded veal, lamb, chicken, pork or ham; they give a zest to the 'fry' that makes the home folks ask for more.

Softened with milk and used with usual spicing and fixing as an inside dressing for baked fish or fowl they impart a delicate flavor to the finished dish, reminding of the chestnut fillings that cast a halo around the days of old-time cooking.

GOVERNMENT OWNERSHIP.

It is a common prediction that the trend of railroad legislation and regulation must eventually end in Government ownership and operation, and there is in some quarters a deep-seated conviction that the country is proceeding rapidly to this final disposition of the railroad question. In support of this belief the present program for the physical valuation of the railroad properties for the purpose of furnishing a basis for equitable rate-making is instigated.

As a matter of equity, the Government ought to take over the railroads at a fair valuation if it proposes to take their management out of the hands of the stockholders. Not even the Government may confiscate personal property without proper compensation.

But it is not likely that the Government will regulate the railroads to the disadvantage of the point, or take them over at all. Railroad ownership and operation must remain in private hands, but the chances are that they would be largely eliminated by a civil service system which would defy the assaults of party and break any party that tried to break it.

Against such doubtful advantages as these are (1) the responsibility of a proper administration of such a vast and complicated system, and (2) the burden of the debt which would be created by its purchase.

THE UNENROLLED VOTERS.

There is much speculation as to the effect of party enrollment and its significance. Enrollment in the boroughs was heavy and in the townships light, yet upon the whole the enrollment is as great as the vote usually cast at a primary election when there were no extraordinary contests on hand. Enrollment is greater in the towns because it is easily accomplished; it is more trouble in the townships. Furthermore, it must be remembered that many voters do not yet understand this primary election registration, and of that account have approached it with reluctance. They are waiting to see how it works.

The unenrolled voters will of course have no vote at the primary, but there is nothing to prevent them from voting at the general election. The other citizens will make the nomination, but the unenrolled will vote on them.

The political proclivities of the enrolled voters are shown in the enrollment, but the unenrolled contingent represents the uncertain vote. It is this vote which will enrage the political leaders later on. It will probably be found to be composed of men who vote pretty regularly one ticket or another, so that the political situation will after all be capable of pretty accurate analysis.

This may have been one of the objects of the enrollment law. Even so the law was abundantly justified in view of past political experience.

ANOTHER COUNCILMAN KICK.

Connellsville's dual government has raised some nice questions of custom and law, and there remains still another worthy of at least speculative consideration.

Admitting that it is the right of the majority of Council to remove its presiding officer and elect another in his stead, it is extremely doubtful whether the new presiding officer has any right to remove old committees and appoint new ones.

The right to appoint committees is inherent in the Council and is exercised by the President only as a matter of rule of order. In Connelleville it has been a custom. But the committee of a legislative or executive body are those chosen for the elective term of life of the body, and are never removed by the President or Speaker, presumably because the power to do so rests only with the body itself.

President Burns has probably exceeded his powers in appointing new committees, but it would seem reasonable to assume that the Councilmanic body, which is to say a majority of the Council, has ample power to recall any or all of its committees and to appoint others.

The borough administration of Connelleville will, we hope, be able to straighten out its kinks before the new city administration relieves it of its puzzle pictures on the first Monday of January, 1914.

The proposed automobile ordinance should contain a section forbidding the use of the muffler cut-out. The First City of Fayette should not be so far behind some of its boroughs in this respect.

The News, ever shifty and misleading, in a weak endeavor to promote Republican discord, confuse past political history with present political endeavor. What we may say about the past leadership of the Republican faction does not now matter. That is over. We are living in a more peaceful present. That is what is hurting the Democratic organ. It knows that Republican peace spoils Democratic defeat.

The Chattanooga wound up in a luster of fun and a very satisfactory enrollment for 1914.

Emmeline Hankurst is coming to America. For the love of Mike, Jimmy, be reasonable.

The Uniontown Herald tells its readers that they can buy the paper on the boardwalk at Atlantic City. That's funny. In a two week's sojourn there we never heard of The Herald on the boardwalk. There were calls for the Uniontown Critic, Trolley Talk and the Turkeyfoot News, but The Herald didn't seem to be in demand. The circulation that is never heard of is no circulation at all.

Just now water is a substantial asset.

It's back to books for the school children.

The Burns Council is proceeding to do some things which should have been done long ago by the First Council, namely, the repairing of the East Side bridge and the extension of the fire protection service in that locality in Snyderstown. Whether the Burns majority is in order or not, it is putting things in order.

Steel circles are hopeful of better business and coke circles will be satisfied if it becomes no worse.

It is announced that the only cloud on the title of the Bureau of Mines property in Pittsburg is one of squatter Sovereignty not worth mentioning, the claimant being a mere railroad.

It looks as if the Burges could make good money under any old administration.

Jack Johnson just can't be kept off the first page.

Criminal court draws to a pretty end.

It is proposed to legislate the wooden passenger coach out of existence before it is all reduced to kindling wood.

The Moose movement in Connelleville is not of the Bull variety.

Connellsville merchant coke operators have discovered a long-involving backbone.

The Tourist.

By GEORGE FITCH,
Author of "At Good Old Slawash."

The tourist is a patient beast of burden who spends his summers carrying American cash to Europe and lugging back European souvenirs. As a rule, the tourist is more overworked on the way over than he is on the return trip.

The tourist must not be confused with the traveler. A traveler is a man who goes away in order to feel at home. If he were to be called a tourist he would rise up and stab his defamer with an Italian cigar.

The traveler goes away to travel for years at a stretch and nothing irritates him so much as the sight of a dusty but determined American tourist going over in two months the ground he has been painstakingly covering for the last three years.

When the traveler remembers how it took him three weeks to look at the picture of St. Sebastian, collecting bottle arrows and three months to investigate Chianti wine in its native lair he boils with indignation at the tourist who does a whole art gallery in a day and contents himself with the national red ink of Italy at his meals.

To the traveler as he inchworms slowly over the map of Europe learning the smells of Italy by heart and forgetting who the last President of the United States was, the tourist is nothing but a nuisance. Struck to my, the tourist regards the traveler with the same affection.

America is full of brave and noble tourists who have refrained heroically from scattering the skull stuffing of a traveler who has met them on ship board and has said kindly, "On my first 19 trips to Europe I too was enthusiastic."

The tourist is usually a tourist because he has too much to do in America to waste all his time in Europe. Many a tired school teacher who has spent six weeks in Europe and ten years preparing for the trip could take a chronic traveler aside and tell him more of the more equal hemisphere than he had ever suspected. Always excepting the wines and hotels, nobody knows as much about these subjects as the traveler—not even the hotelkeepers and the winemakers.

The tourist sees Europe on the run because that is all the time or money he has. With the same time the traveler would not get the bill of fare of the first hotel entirely considered and with the same money he would stay at home.

The tourist misses a great deal because he is in such a hurry. This is one of the great advantages of being a tourist. There is a great deal in Europe which can only be missed that way. We would not think of going to a tourist for inside information regarding Monte Carlo and the Ritz-Carlton restaurants. But he usually knows who built the Coliseum and on American history he is immense.

"Does a whole art gallery in a day."

One can always tell whether a man is a tourist or a traveler by the way he looks at America when he returns. If it is a pretty good country he is a tourist.

"I suffered for five years with stomach trouble and could not eat as much as a blanch without suffering. I have taken three bottles of Chamberlain's Tablets and am now a well woman and weigh 105 pounds. I can eat anything I want to, and as much as I want and feel better than I have at any time in my life. I refer to any one in Boone Hill or vicinity and they will touch for what I say." ## Save the Babies.

INFANT MORTALITY is something frightful. We can hardly realize that of all the children born in civilized countries, twenty-two per cent., or nearly one-quarter, die before they reach one year; thirty-seven per cent., or more than one-third, before they are five, and one-half before they are fifteen.

We do not hesitate to say that a timely use of Castoria would save a majority of these precious lives. Neither do we hesitate to say that many of these infantile deaths are occasioned by the use of narcotic preparations. Drops, tinctures and soothing syrups sold for children's complaints contain more or less opium or morphine. They are, in considerable quantities, deadly poisons. In any quantity, they stupefy, retard circulation and lead to congestions, sickness, death. Castoria operates exactly the reverse, but you must see that it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. Castoria causes the blood to circulate properly, opens the pores of the skin and allays fever.

Genuine Castoria always bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher

Mrs. Wallace Ryland were elected delegates to the state convention at Johnstown from October 3 to 7. Mrs. B. H. Stoner read a report of the inter-county institute at Johnstown.

Mrs. and Mr. Wallace Ryland entertained about 50 persons from Greensburg and this place with a corn roast at their Rathven home. The lawn was lighted with electric lights. Prof. C. L. Gandy roasted the corn to a turn, while William Stevenson roasted the potatoes and Mr. Ryland kept the fire up. Other delicious refreshments were served and a very pleasant evening was spent. Maxine Welsh, aged two months, is dead at her Armstrong home. Interment will be made in the local cemetery today.

ABOUT THE LADIES

By United Press.
BERLIN—Fraulein Deiblin, the founder of a league "against beauty," members of which are pledged to marry only ugly men, says that handsome men are unreliable.

NEW YORK—Mrs. Sarah M. Kuhlman strangled her husband's ashes to her body for a political hoodlum and started forth to campaign against an alderman.

DETROIT—In a battle over the merits of their respective wives' dresses, Louis Rodick and Fred Orloff were seriously injured. Orloff was killed three times.

PARIS—Women cab drivers, of whom there were at one time about 100, are disappearing from Paris streets. The public lost interest in them when the novelty wore off.

LONDON—X-ray shoes—the tops made of Irish lace—are the latest thing in feminine fashion designed to go with the diaphanous gown and the harem veil.

CONSTANTINOPLE—The Turkish

women who insist upon wearing elaborate suggestive of European fashions are running a big risk. Several have been thrown into jail for the offense.

CHICAGO—Chicago women go the Parisienne several better when it comes to wearing "tuds." Baron Frederic de Montargis, of Paris, was shocked when he saw Chicago suit skirts.

PHILADELPHIA—A baseball team comprising girls dressed in bloomers played a team of preachers wearing skirts. The girls won the game, 16 to 5.

ST. LOUIS—There was a near riot on Grand avenue when a pretty girl wearing a gown slit to the knee revealed the fact that she wore no stockings.

WILL SAY MANY THINGS.

Baltimore & Ohio Has Ambitious Betterment Program for Year.

The maintenance program of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad for the year 1913 calls for the laying of 2,500,000 cross ties in its tracks. During the past six months of the year 1,250,000 ties were placed in the tracks. Last year the company laid 2,500,000 new ties.

Most of the ties which are placed in Baltimore & Ohio tracks are chemically treated, which adds to their wearing quality. A large percentage of the ties are treated in the timber preservation plant recently built by the Baltimore & Ohio at Green Spring, W. Va.

Diarrhoea Quickly Cured.

"I was taken with diarrhoea and Mr. Burke the merchant here, persuaded me to try a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. After taking one dose of it I was cured. It also cured others that I gave it to. Write M. D. DeBart, Orioles, Pa. That is not at all unusual. An ordinary attack of diarrhoea can almost invariably be cured by one or two doses of this remedy. ## A Human Match Factory

The body contains phosphorus sufficient to make 150,000 matches. Phosphorus is one of fourteen elements composing the body—divided among bones, flesh, nervous system and other organs. The perfect health of body requires a perfect balance of the elements. These elements come from the food we eat—the stomach extracts and distributes them.

But if stomach is deranged—the balance of health is destroyed and the blood does not carry the proper elements to the different organs, and there is blood trouble—nervous trouble—heart trouble. Pain is the hungry cry of starved organs. Put the liver, stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition into a condition of health. That is just what is done by

FINDS PIRATES IN GUISE OF MONKS

"Brothers" From Holy Mt. Athos Ex-Mutliners.

THEY ONCE TERRORIZED COASTS

Vanished With Cash on Russian Warship Kulus Potemkin, Eight Years Ago and Last Pious Lives Till Balkan War Rumored Them; Police Active.

A story as strange as any in fiction has just come to light in Greece, Russia's principal port on the Black sea.

After eight years of impunity from the wrath of Russia the mutineers of the Russian battleship Kulus Potemkin, who killed their officers, bombarded Odessa and for a month defied the authorities, eventually surrendering themselves to the Roumanian government and then vanishing, no one knew where, have now been discovered. For eight years eighty of these mutineers have been living as monks on holy Mount Athos, where, perched upon the heights, are twenty-one monasteries, founded by Russians, Greeks and Bulgarians in the thirteenth century.

Warlike Spirit Kindled.

For some time there had been factional quarrels among the monks. Recently 1,800 Russian monks, headed by an ex-mutineer officer of the Russian army, informed the Greek authorities because of a difference of opinion upon certain new dogmas. These monks became so serious that the Roumanian government was compelled to send a ship to bring home the trouble makers.

On the arrival of the monks in Odessa they were met by a police official, instantly he recognized in a monk's habit one of the seamen he wanted to arrest in July, 1905, for mutiny on board the Kulus Potemkin. He continued his investigations, and to his amazement he discovered no less than eighty mutineers, all khabas as monks, among the peace breakers of the holy mount.

The mutineers have now confessed their participation in the mutiny, admitting that they surrendered to the Roumanian authorities at Constantia, on the Black sea, on condition that they should not be handed over to Russia. From that time they vanished from sight. They say they removed from the battleship her treasure and with it made their way to Mount Athos, where they entered one of the Russian monasteries. Afterward they were joined by a Russian lieutenant, whom they had driven from St. Petersburg.

Greek Monks Conquered.

The news of the Balkan war suggested in the mutineers the idea of conquering Mount Athos for Russia, but the Greeks outwitted them by sending for help to the archbishop at Constantinople, who in turn notified the Russian government. From the precipitous heights, 6,000 feet above sea level the troublesome monks were let down in baskets and hauled over the rocks which guard the foot of the holy mount. There is no other means of embarking from the mountain.

When the identity of the monks was first established they were put in iron amid the greatest excitement. The monkish habits were stripped from them, and they were hurried away to prison pending their trial, which will probably end in banishment to the Siberian mines.

Their leader, the ex-mutineer, was not on board, and it is supposed that at the last moment he made his peace with the Greek monks and was allowed to stay among them.

Now, then, five and three? Peperi (after another long look under the bench)—Eight. Teacher—Well, how did you manage to do that? Peperi—With my toes, teacher. I'll gamble better.

CURIOUS DUELS.

Combats in Which the Weapons Selected Were Avalanches.

An extraordinary duel was fought near Mont Blanc in France. Two young men who had fallen in love with the same girl arranged to fight a duel, with nature as decider of the result.

Selecting a part of that mountainous district, many thousand feet up, where avalanches are known to fall at frequent intervals, the lovers agreed to take it in turns to stand for a given time in the most dangerous spot that could be found. The idea was that when one was killed by an avalanche the other should be free to propose to the girl whom they both loved. In this case the idea became a fact.

This is not the only instance on record of a duel by avalanche. A few years ago two Italians, named Guetta and Sorio, decided to test fate in this manner, and also for the love of a woman.

For three mornings they tempted nature, but nothing serious happened. On the fourth day Guetta was knocked down by a falling avalanche, but not much hurt. Then it was that their food supply gave out, and they returned home to get some more. By this time the police had come to hear of their strange duel, and threatened them both with imprisonment. So the undaunted rivals settled their differences in another and less adventurous way. They drew lots for their lady love. Sorio won, and after Guetta had left the village he was married to the girl of his choice.—London Answers.

TOBACCO WAR AHEAD.

American Company About to Enter British Field.

A great tobacco war between the principal British and American companies may begin in London at any moment as the outcome of the threatened "invasion" of England and other European countries by the Tobacco Products Corporation of America. One of the heads of a big British concern said recently:

"I believe it is a fact that an American corporation intends to attempt to enter the English field and open up depots on a large scale in rivalry with the Imperial Tobacco company. Whether the enterprise contemplated will succeed or not is another matter. One of many factors that will have to be reckoned with is the conservatism of the English tobacco consumer."

WOMEN NOT GOOD RISKS.

Feminine Intuition Gives Death Warning, Say Insurance Officials.

Women's intuition informs them of approaching death, for which reason they seek life insurance and are undesirable risks, according to delegates at the medical section meeting of the American Life Insurance association in St. Paul.

The matter was debated without definite conclusion as to the stand to be taken. It was asserted by several speakers that splinters are better risks than married women.

An Unburied Picture.

Rossetti secured permission in 1898 to reopen the coffin of his wife in order to secure the manuscripts of some poems which he had buried with her seven years before.

Some such incident might have occurred in connection with J. M. W. Turner if his desire to be buried wrapped up in his own painting of "Carthage" had been carried out. There was some difficulty in selling the painting, and the artist kept the canvas by him. He always said he would be wrapped in it when he was buried and even went so far as to ask Chantrey if his executor would fulfill his wishes on that point.

"No doubt," answered the sculptor, "I shall bury you rolled up in your picture if it is one of the conditions of your will, but I would take you up next day and unroll you!"

A Genius.

"Oh, doctor, I feel so discouraged—whoooping cough, measles, mumps and croup, one after the other, and now my child is ill again!"

"Why, the boy's a genius!"

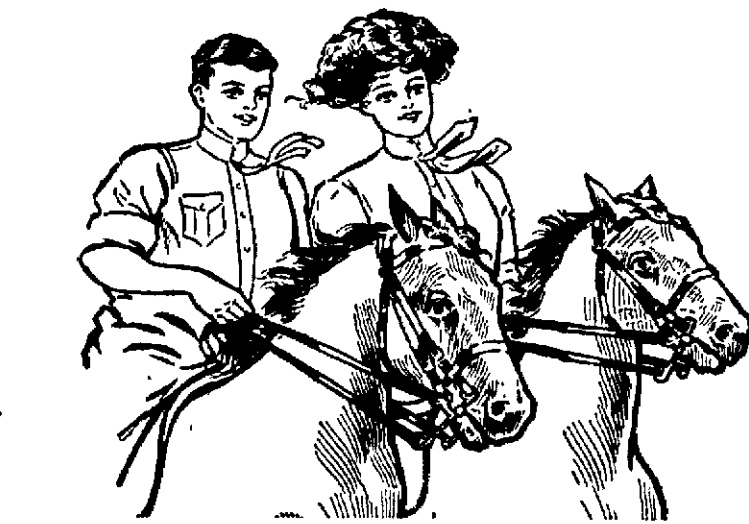

"A genius?"

"Yes—infinite capacity for taking pains, you know."—London Tit-Bits.

STRENGTH OF A LIMPET.

Its Sticking Power Largely Due to Atmospheric Pressure.

Every one is familiar with the saying "to stick like a limpet," but there are not so many who know how it is that a limpet is able to stick as it does to the rocks upon which it passes its existence. The creature is able by means of the central portion of its body, which can be raised independently of the edge or frill which surrounds it, to create a vacuum much in the same way that a piece of soft wet leather can be made to adhere to a smooth surface by pressing out all the air. Thus the so called "strength" of the limpet is largely due to atmospheric pressure.

It is not entirely so, however, for if they are closely examined it will be seen that the shells accommodate themselves around the edges to the surface of the rock upon which the limpet is located, and if removed to another spot the edge of the shell will probably be found to be a very bad fit and the creature's power of adhesion somewhat lessened. If taken by surprise with a smart sliding blow even a large limpet is easily enough dislodged, but if it is given the slightest warning its power of suction is instantly brought into play and very often considerable force is then necessary before it can be detached.—London Standard.

FOR YOUR HAIR.

English Malines Novelty in Coiffure Ornaments.

Dainty Adornment in Pale Blue.

English malines in pale blue tone is used for this dainty aigret ornament designed to be worn with a gown of pale blue chiffon and lace.

It can easily be made at home with two yards of malines. Simply divide three-quarters of a yard of malines in three pieces, cutting lengthwise and braid it as you would hair. Then take the yard and a quarter which you have left and divide it into five pieces, cutting across the material, which gives you five pieces of malines a quarter yard each.

With these five pieces form an aigret as pictured and twist part of the braided portion to form a loop to hide the aigret joining.

Legend About Names.

There is a charming legend about the name Margaret, and all its variations, from Meg to Daisy, share it. Margaret is of Persian origin, and means child of light or pearl. The Persian legend says that oysters are moon worshippers and that each night they come up from the bed of the deep sea to open their shells and worship their deity.

Each faithful oyster that opens its shell in worship is rewarded for its belief, for the moon deposits in it a drop of dew—translucent, shimmering in light, and showing wondrous colors—which the moonbeams turn into a pearl. Margaret is the old Persian name; and through the Greek adaptation, Margaritis, it developed into the name it is today.

CHAPTER III.

In which I Deliver a Letter.
SIR GEOFFREY'S will, as Master Pickin read it, was a simple matter. It left everything of which he had possessed to his daughter. Unfortunately, he died possessed of nothing. The document was mere waste paper. Everything was mortgaged, every family portrait even. Mistress Lucy appeared to have no legal right to anything in or out of the castle, save the clothes she wore.

"The point is," Mistress Lucy said, as Master Pickin bowed deferentially toward her, "that I have nothing?"
"Nothing from your father, madam,"
"But my mother's estate?"
"I regret to say," said Master Pickin, "that most of it has been converted into money and lost by your father. There is left in my hands, madam, only a matter of some £2,000, not at interest, which you, being now of full age—"

"I was eighteen on my last birthday."
"Exactly, so that it is at your present disposal."
"What shape is it in?"
"It is invested in consols."
"Can they be realized upon?"
"Instantly."
"To advantage?"
"Most certainly."
"I thank you, Master Pickin, for your prudent care of my little fortune. It is most unexpected," she faltered.

"Believe me, Mistress Lucy, it is a happiness to do anything for you," said the old attorney, rising and gathering up his papers and bowing low before her. "You may command me in everything. A temporary loan or—"
"Thank you, Master Pickin," said Mistress Lucy; "you touch me greatly, but I need nothing at present. My father made me an allowance and generally paid it. It was a generous one, and, living alone as I did, I did not spend it. I have a few hundred pounds in my own name at the bank, and with that for temporary use and my mother's legacy I shall lack nothing."

"But where will you live, Mistress Lucy?"
"It matters little," she answered listlessly.
"My sister and I," said the old attorney, "live alone in the country town. The house is large. If you would accept our hospitality until your future is decided we should be vastly honored."

"I accept your kindly proffer most thankfully," was her reply. "I have been invited to various houses here and there in the country, but I prefer to go to you."
"Good," said Master Pickin briskly. "That is settled then. I am empowered by those who hold the mortgage to tell you that the pictures of your father or mother or anything strictly personal they waive their claim to."
"Thank you," said Mistress Lucy. "I shall take but small advantage of their generosity."

"I know that," answered Master Pickin, "and now I will return to the town. If you will be ready about 6 o'clock" (it was then about 2) "I will return and fetch you to our home."
"I shall be ready, Goodby."

The little lawyer bent over her hand and left the room. I sat dumb and silent during the whole interview, although I had listened to everything with the deepest interest. As usual, it was she who broke the silence when we were alone again.

"Master Hampden," she began, "to what a sorry pass am I reduced! What shall I do now?"
"My lady," said I, "the sorriest part of the pass to which you have been brought is that you have in me such a poor counselor, a rough sailor, but one who would, nevertheless, give his heart's blood to promote your welfare, or do you any service."

Now, as I said that I laid my hand on the breast of my coat, and as I bent awkwardly enough toward her—I could not even bow as gracefully as the little attorney just departed—I felt the paper which I had taken from Sir Geoffrey's hand and which I had entrusted to her, and which I had followed by death. I stood open mouthed with surprise and shame at my carelessness, and stared at her.

"Yes," said I, "where is it?"
"Where is it?" she asked. "I pointed with my huge index finger to the figures in the upper left hand corner and the upper right hand corner marked respectively latitude and longitude."
"That will tell us exactly,"
"And you can find it?"
"If it is there where the figures say I can as easily as I can find the park gate yonder."
She looked at me with a certain amount of awe. "Why, that is wonderful!" she exclaimed.
"Not at all. It is done by seamen every day."
"Have you ever been there?"
"No," said I. "I have crossed the south seas several times, but I have never chanced upon that island or, in fact, sailed anywhere near that latitude or longitude."
"But you know where it is?"
"Exactly, and if I had my great

"It is an island!" she exclaimed.

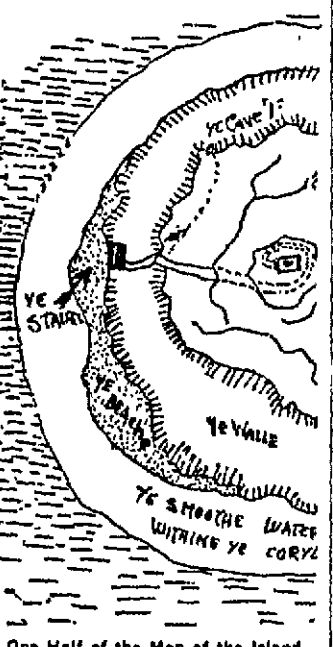

chart of the south seas here I could put my finger upon it and show it to you."

"What," she asked, pointing with her own dainty finger in her turn, "that ring around the island?"
"That will be a coral reef, I take it. They usually are broken at some point so that ships can sail within, but here is a complete circle enclosing the island. There seems to be no entrance anywhere. 'Tis unusual and most strange."

"Perhaps the man that drew it made a mistake."
"I think not. The map has been made by a seafaring man, that is plain."
"I see, and the island itself is a circle," she said, bending to inspect it more closely.

"Yes," said I, "and it is like no island that I have ever seen, for here be two great rings like a giant's wall and a hill or something of the sort in the middle." I bent lower over it in my turn. My eyes were unusually keen, and I saw a word written on the outside of the island proper and between it and the coral reef. "See," said I, "the word 'SUN'!"

"SUN!" exclaimed the girl in amazement. "Did you ever see stairs on an island?"
"No, I have not, but there may be some natural means of ascent."
"It is most strange and unaccountable," she said. "You have been a faithful, devoted servant, Master Hampden, and I have no hesitation in telling you all I know. My mother and father were distant relatives—that is, they were descendants in the fifth generation from two brothers."

"Exactly," said I. "Your father's note says this parchment has been in his possession for five generations, and evidently it was in the possession of your mother's people for the same time. Who was the father of these two brothers?"

"She thought a moment."
"Sir Philip Wilberforce was his name," she said.
"A sailor?" I exclaimed.

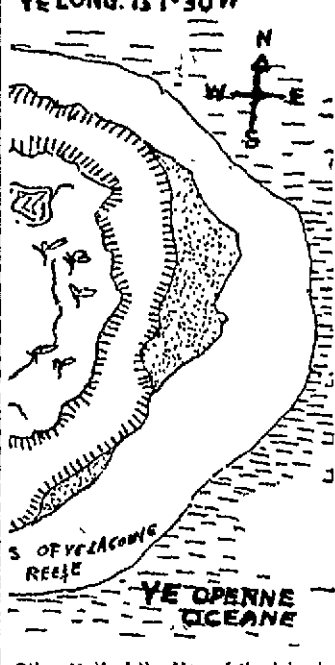

"Yes," he roared in distant seas in Queen Elizabeth's time. Geoffrey and Oliver, his sons, quarrelled over his property after his death, and—"
"There you have it. They divided his fortune and tore the parchment apart, it being thought valuable for some reason and each kept half."
"That is the tradition as regards the fortune, and it may account for the parchment."
"What next, madam?"
"The families drifted apart and gradually died out until Sir Geoffrey and my mother were alone left of their respective lines, and without knowing the relationship they met and married and I—she faltered and put her hand over her face—"am the only one left of the family, of either branch."
"Now, here," said I, devoutly, for I fully believed what I said, "are the workings of Divine Providence. The parchment came from old Sir Philip, it was torn by his sons and the pieces came not together until in you the ancient lines were united."
"Yes, but what does it mean?" she asked, turning to the table again. "There is writing on the back."

CHAPTER IV.

Wherein We decide to Go Voyaging.
LORDS put the two pieces together and saw it was not a parchment but a map. "Mistress Wilberforce," I continued, "I have the sailor's premonition that we are on the track of something that will greatly better your fortunes." And I read:
"In ye years of our Lord 1555 J. Philip Wilberforce, Esq. of ye county of Devon, being ye captain of ye good shippe Scourge of Malice, did take ye gracie Spanish galleon Nuestra Senora de la Concepcion, after a bloody encounter, wherein mine own shippe was sunk. Ye landing of ye galleon was worthe much monie, millions of pounds sterling, I take ye. With mine jewels and stones of price, pieces of eight and bullion, together with silkes and spices, being blown to ye south and weste maine days in a gracie tempeste, ye galleon was crosse waye on Ye Island of ye Stairs. Wee landed ye treasure and hidde ye in ye walls. All ye menne being in ye ends dead ye natives came over ye seas in their gracie canoes and took ye being like a madde manne. Godde mercifullie preserving my life, I escaped frome thence and at last came safe into mine owne sweet lande of Englande once more. Too find ye mouth of ye treasure cave; take a bearing alonge ye south of ye three Goddes on ye Altar of Skulls on ye middle billie of ye lande. Where ye line strakes ye kulle in ye walls with ye big pinnace too late three hours Climbe ye stone, enter ye center one Ye is there. Lette him that will seek and finde."

When I had finished reading we both stopped and stared. There was much in it, of course, that we could not possibly understand. We could only comprehend it fully if we were lucky enough to stand beside the "Stone Gods" on the island itself. But the general purport was sufficiently clear. Sir Philip Wilberforce had evidently concealed a very considerable treasure there. If we could find it our fortunes would be made, or, rather, for I swear I never thought of myself at all.

"Think you," my little mistress began at last, her pale face flushing for the first time, her words heaving quickly, "that the treasure may still be there?"

One Half of the Map of the Island.

"Who can tell?" I answered. "The island may have remained unvisited since Sir Philip's day."
"But would treasure last so long?"
"Stored in a cave gold and silver would last forever. Everything else would have rotted away probably."

"How could we get there?" she asked.
"If you had a ship," said I, "well, compassed and founded and manned you could reach the spot without difficulty."
"How much would it cost?"

Well, I quickly and roughly estimated in my mind the necessary outfit. Such a vessel as she would require might be bought for perhaps £2,000 or £3,000. Provisioning and outfitting, together with the pay of the officers and the crew, would require perhaps £1,000 or £2,000 more, or a total between five and six thousand pounds. And she had but two! I was about to tell her the prohibitive truth when the solution of the problem suddenly came to me. In one way or another I had been a fortunate voyager, and I had saved up or earned by trading and one or two adventures in which I had taken part something over £4,000, which was safely lodged to my credit in a London bank.

"I should think," I said slowly, "that £2,000 would be ample to cover everything."

"Ah," she said, "exactly the sum that Master Pickin said was left of my mother's fortune."
"Yes," said I, and then I added in duty bound, "But you surely would not be so foolish, Mistress Wilberforce, as to risk your all in this wild goose chase?"

"If you were in my position, Master Hampton, what would you do?"
"I am a man," I answered, "accustomed to shift for myself. I might take a risk which I would not advise you to essay."
"I must shift for myself, too," she said, her eyes sparkling. The God-dess Chance, which had ruined her father, was evidently jogging her elbow. "Indeed, I shall take the chance," she persisted.

"But you could easily live on £2,000 for a long while," I urged, against my wish, for I was loath to go a treasure hunting with her for a shipmate.
"Not such life as I crave. If I cannot have enough for my desires I would be worse off had I nothing."

Well, I was arguing against my wishes from a sense of duty, so I at last gave way. After all, the treasure might be there. If so, it was hers, and it would be a shame not to get it. The pulse of adventure leaped in my veins.

"So be it," I said.
"Will you help me to make my arrangements? You are accustomed to the sea, and—"

"I will do more than that," said I. "With your gracious permission I will go with you."

"To the island?"
"To the end of the world," I replied. Whereat she stared at me a moment, then looked away.

She extended her hand to me and I tried to kiss it like a gentleman. I made, no doubt, a blundering effort, but at least it was that of an honest man.

"I must go and get ready to go to Master Pickin's in the town," she said softly. "You know the house?"
I nodded.

"Come to me there tomorrow and we will talk further about the project."

When we reached the subject to Master Pickin the next day at his house, he would not hear of it. He examined the parchment with interest, but postponed the tale because, forsooth, it had no legal backing and was couched in the phraseology of the sea rather than in the dry verbiage of the law. He pointed out that he had only succeeded in finding this last £2,000 of my lady's fortune because he had skillfully concealed its existence from Sir Geoffrey. He asked pertinently what would happen to her when all was gone and she had found no treasure, the very existence of which he affected to disbelieve.

A very hard headed, practical person was Master Pickin. I had stern ideas of duty, too, and Master Pickin's good sense ever appeared to me. Yet when did more good sense ever appeal to a woman against her wish? My lady had the gambling instinct, too—I wonder she did not have it stronger, since "twas in her blood—and she would have challenged fortune.

The end of it was she made over her £2,000 to me without requiring me to give any bond, which Master Pickin would have insisted upon. She would have been a splendid business woman for me, for my bond would have been my own capital, which I was going to embark in the enterprise in secret. I had saved up that money with no one knows what foolish dreams. I realized those dreams would come to naught. I had no one dependent upon me. Brother or sister I never enjoyed, and father and mother were both dead. What need had I for money? Let her have it whose need was great and whose desire was greater. I might have bargained for a share of the treasure did we find any, but I scorned to do it. I would give all and expect nothing for it.

At any rate, not being in any hurry, although I was fruitfully urged by my lady, who could scarcely possess her soul in patience before she began her treasure hunting, I looked about a good deal in order to get just what I wanted. Finally from a merchant of Plymouth I purchased a stout little ship of three hundred and fifty tons burden called the Rose of Devon, which had been engaged in the West Indian and the American colonial trade.

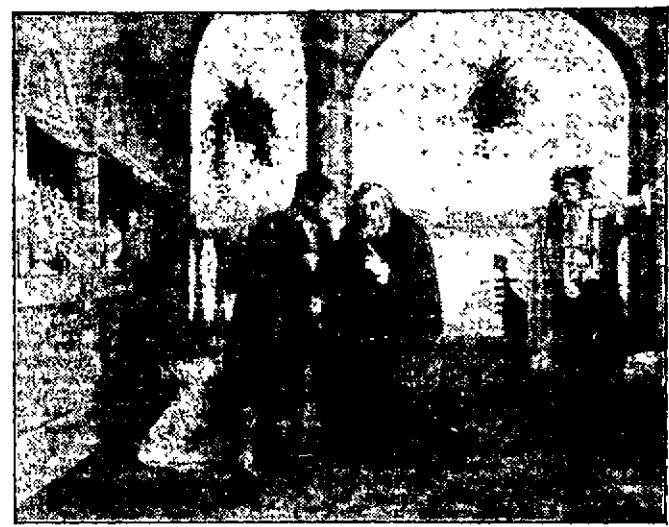

It was my first design to have gone as master of her myself, and my lady would have had it so, but after reflection I decided it were better to have a much older man than I to command so long as she went as a passenger, and so I engaged a worthy seaman, one Samuel Matthews, old enough to be my father, with whom I had often sailed; in fact, the man under whom I made my first cruise. I did engage myself as mate, however, and I even tried in vain to induce Master Pickin and his sister to go with us.

It seemed proper in venturing among islands filled with savage people to provide with a few men, after consulting with Captain Matthews, whom I fully acquainted with the entire project in all its details, I shipped a crew of thirty men and I provided in the equipment plenty of muskets, pistols and cutlasses, with the necessary powder and ball, and in addition a small brass cannon which I mounted on the fore-castle. Nor did our cargo lack means for friendly trading and barter should such be found practicable.

Naturally the unbusiness of these preparations attracted attention, and Captain Matthews and I were overwhelmed with applications from adventurous men who desired to make the voyage, surmising that it was after treasure of some sort.

I left the work of engaging the crew to Captain Matthews. He had a boat-

THE SOISSON.

THE EDISON TALKING PICTURES. The Kinetophone or Edison Talking Pictures, will be seen here for the first time at the Soisson Theatre to-night. Just as wonderful as was his invention of the original moving picture is the latest discovery of the great wizard Edison. It is predicted, for the Kinetophone that real flesh and blood actors on many stages in the country will soon be a thing of past. To judge from the little group of astonishment and the chorus of "It's not that something wonderful!" that one hears on all sides wherever the pictures are exhibited the Kinetophone may be called an immense success.

Scene in "A Butterfly on the Wheel."

"A BUTTERFLY ON THE WHEEL." During the last engagement of "A Butterfly on the Wheel" at the Thirty-Ninth Street Theatre, New York, many prominent people saw this wonderful play which has as its main theme the question of divorce. Judge (Mr. J. G. Galt), new chairman of the board of directors of the United States Steel Corporation, and Mrs. Gary, after seeing "A Butterfly on the Wheel" sent this expression of opinion to the management:
"Mrs. Gary and I enjoyed immensely 'A Butterfly on the Wheel.' It has great merit. It is strong and artistic, and of more than ordinary merit. The original production will be seen at the Soisson Theatre Monday, September 8, with a specially selected cast."

Three launches a minute throughout the performance a minute is promised amusement seekers at the Soisson

Theatre Friday, September 12 when the merry musical comedy, "Busy Izzy," 1914 edition will be presented with George Sidney in the title role and a large and clever company headed by Charlie Webster. Musical comedy of big proportions is a sign of the times and there appears to be a fierce struggle for supremacy going on all the while the majority of theatre-goers keep in a receptive mood for entertainment of that character. A show with plenty of comedy acted, intensified by lots of pretty music, and handsome girls, brilliant electrical effects and a scenic environment of more than ordinary merit is what goes to make "Busy Izzy" one of the leaders in the musical farce comedy time, and a treat is in store for the theatre patrons who are fortunate enough to witness the entertainment when it is presented in this city.

THINGS ALL OUGHT TO KNOW

As Christian Bible Students—The Satisfactory Proof of "Why God Permits Evil."

One of the questions which comes to nearly every thinking mind today is, "Why does God permit evil?" As we look about us in the world we observe that it is filled with sorrow and trouble, sickness and pain and every trial we could enumerate, and we cannot help wondering WHY GOD ALLOWS IT. We realize that life is mighty and that He could prevent it if He wished. We read in His Word that He is more willing to do for His children than are earthly parents for theirs, and we know how much that means; yet oftentimes it seems that those who try to do and live right have the most trouble. This question is made very clear in a book entitled, "The Divine Plan of the Ages." Every statement is backed by Scripture, and shows that while God does not sanction evil HE HAS HAD A PURPOSE IN ALLOWING SIN AND DEATH TO REIGN THESE SIX THOUSAND YEARS. This and many other subjects of deep interest to all of God's people are discussed fully and in language easy of comprehension.

Running No Risk.

"What," asks the maiden aunt, "going to marry that Mr. Newrun? Why, you hardly know the man, Imogene. In the few days you have been acquainted with him you cannot possibly have learned anything of his family or antecedents or habits or personal circumstances."

"That is true, Aunt Keurah. But you have always told me that no woman who knows anything about a man will marry him."

PENNSYLVANIA COKE OUTPUT AS SHOWN BY VARIOUS DISTRICTS

Connellsville District Out-ranks All Other Sections
In Every Way.

TWELVE FIELDS ARE COVERED

Geological Survey Issues Annual Report Showing the Tonnage for 1912
In All of Them; Connellsville District is the Largest in the World.

Interesting figures on the coke production of the various districts in Pennsylvania are to be found in the annual report of the United States Geological Survey, compiled by E. W.
Parker, chief statistician. The importance of the Connellsville region is emphasized. It still ranks as the greatest coke producing region in the world.

There are 12 coke fields in the state. The Allegheny Mountain district includes the ovens along the Pennsylvania railroad from Allegheny eastward over the crest of the Alleghenies to a point beyond Altoona.

The Allegheny Valley district formerly included the coke works of Armstrong and Butler counties, and one of those in Clarion county, the other ovens in the latter county being included in the Reynolds-Walston district. All but two of the Allegheny Valley plants have been abandoned, and the production previous to 1909 has been included in the Pittsburgh district. During 1911 but one of these plants was in operation.

What was previously known as the Heaver district included the ovens in Deaver and Mercer counties, but all the ovens in Heaver county have been abandoned, those formerly operated by the Semet-Solway Company have been abandoned, and the operations of the one establishment of United-Otto ovens at South Sharon are now also included in the Pittsburgh district.

The Bloomsburg and Broadtop districts embrace the Bloomsburg and Broadtop coal fields. The ovens of the Clearfield-Center district are chiefly in the two counties from which it derives its name.

The Connellsville district is the well-known region of Western Pennsylvania in Westmoreland and Fayette counties, extending just south of Latrobe to Fairbairn. The Lower Connellsville region is entirely in Fayette county and southwest of the Connellsville Basin, proper, from which it is separated by the Greenburg anticline. It embraces the recent developments in the vicinity of Uniontown and is the second producing district of the state.

The Greensburg, Irwin, Pittsburgh and Reynolds-Walston districts include the ovens near the towns which have given names to these districts. The Upper Connellsville district, sometimes called the Latrobe district, is near the town of Latrobe.
The Semet-Solway ovens at Chester, Shelton and Lebanon, and the United-Otto ovens at Lebanon are in what has been designated as the Lebanon-Schuylkill district. The production of districts having less than three producers is combined.

The Allegheny Mountain district includes 25 establishments, with 2,483 ovens, including 372 United-Otto ovens. During 1912, 870,951 tons of coke was produced, valued at $2,141,725, or $2.44 a ton. Two establishments are reported from the Allegheny Valley district, with 52 ovens.
The Connellsville region is credited with 102 establishments of 22,513 ovens, including 1,120 rectangular and 110 Semet-Solway ovens. There was produced in 1912, 11,811,588 tons of coke worth $22,143,602, or $1.90 a ton. The Lower Connellsville region has 71 establishments and 15,525
ovens, including 1,792 rectangular and 250 longitudinal ovens. The coke reached 2,023,371 tons, worth $17,098,420, or $1.90 a ton.

Seven establishments were reported in the Greensburg district, with 2,040 ovens, including 100 Belgium ovens.
The coke tonnage of the Greensburg district for 1912 was $3,251,107, worth $1,683,099, or $2.11 a ton. Two establishments and 250 ovens were reported from the Irwin field.

The Pittsburgh district had 11 establishments and 3,721 ovens, including 332 United-Otto, 500 Belgium and 19 rectangular ovens. The tonnage was 2,301,362, worth $4,818,575, or $2.09 a ton. Ten establishments were reported from the Reynolds-Walston district, with 2,931 ovens, including 11 of the Rumney type. The production for the year was 2,010,657 tons, worth $1,554,416, or $2.28 a ton.

The Upper Connellsville region reported 22 plants of 2,710 ovens, including 133 rectangular ovens. The coke tonnage was 762,700, worth $1,694,127, or $2.09 a ton. Five establishments were reported in the Lebanon and Schuylkill Valley region, there being 528 ovens, including 270 Semet-Solway, 228 United-Otto and 150 Belgium ovens. The output was 851,072 tons of coke valued at $2,917,814 or $3.39 a ton.

In the Broadtop and Clearfield-Center districts were 10 plants and 1,186 ovens, produce 209,711 tons of coke worth $753,901, or $2.66 a ton.
The totals for the state show 277 establishments, 52,754 ovens, a coke tonnage of 27,124,433 tons, worth an average of $2.05 a ton.

On the face it appears that the value of Connellsville coke, which is standard blast furnace fuel in the United States, was less than that made in other parts of the state. This apparent inconsistency is due largely to the fact that nearly all of the coke produced in the Connellsville district is the output of high-ovens located in the immediate vicinity of the mines whence considerable quantities of coal are shipped from the mines of Pennsylvania to reheat-oven plants at Johnstown, Glassport, Chester and Lebanon, and the expense of transportation added to the cost of the coal naturally appears in a higher price for the coke at the ovens. In reaching markets from the Connellsville region, the transportation expenses from ovens to points of consumption must be borne by the coke.

Several districts reported ovens building during the year. The list includes 143 in the Connellsville region, all belmire; 422 in the Lower Connellsville, including 314 of the rectangular type; 798 in the Pittsburg district, of which 476 are the rectangular type; 200 in the Reynolds-Walston, all rectangular; 143 in the Upper Connellsville, 93 of them rectangular; 150 in the Lebanon and Schuylkill Valley, all belmire; and 26
belmire ovens in the Broadtop-Clearfield-Center region.

The average yield of coal in coke throughout the state was 66.6. The greatest recovery was made in the Lebanon-Schuylkill Valley district, where 70.9 per cent was recovered.
In the Allegheny Mountain district, 59.8 was recovered. The Upper Connellsville ranked high, with 68.1, and the Lower Connellsville with 67.1. The recovery in the Connellsville region was 66.6, with 65.3 in Greensburg, 64.8 in the Broadtop-Clearfield-Center district, and 61.6 in the Pittsburgh district. The recovery in the Reynolds-Walston district was only 57.9.

HIGH GRADE COALS

Production in Washington Valued at $4,000,000.

The coals of Washington, while limited to six or seven somewhat scattered areas in the western half of the state, chiefly along the eastern border of Puget Sound, have a wide range in character—from anthracite to lignite. Lignite is found in the southwestern part of the state in Cowitz and Lewis counties. In Lewis county, as the measures approach the mountains the lignite grades upward into coal of subbituminous and bituminous quality. The area along Puget Sound contains subbituminous and bituminous coals, some of the latter possessing fair coking quality, and in the northwestern part of the state, on the slopes of Mount Baker in Whatcom county, anthracite has been reported.

Some natural coke has been observed.
The coking coals of Washington are the only ones of that grade on the Pacific Coast. They are found in the Wilkeson-Carbonado district, in Pierce county; in the north Puget Sound field, in Shagit and Whatcom counties; in the northern part of the Kootenai field, in Kittitas county, but at present coke is made only from the Wilkeson-Carbonado coal. This coal is somewhat high in ash and is usually washed before coking. The smelter at Tacoma takes more of the coke.

The coal-mining industry of Washington has suffered considerably during the last few years from the competition of fuel oil from California, the former principal consumers of Washington coal, the Puget Sound steamers and the railroads, having adopted petroleum for fuel.

The production of coal in Washington reached its maximum in 1910, when the output amounted to 3,911,829 short tons, according to E. W. Parker, of the United States Geological Survey, who compiled the figures in cooperation with the Washington State Survey. It decreased to 3,527,815 tons in 1911 and to 3,360,952 tons in 1912. The value fell off considerably less in proportion, from $3,174,179 to $3,032,571.

Reports to the United States Bureau of Mines show that the fatalities in the coal mines of Washington in 1912 were fewer by one-half than in 1911, the total number of men killed in 1912 being 14 against 27 in 1911.
